

The raisin

The award-winning short moral drama film - The Raisin - directed by Rob Carter, takes place in an isolated far away area in the UK.

It stars Trevor Allan Davis as the main character "a psycho lonely old man" and Helen Ryan "a loyal, kind and honest old lady. " the movie was released in 2017.

The plot includes a judgemental difficult old man who lives alone in his cottage surrounded by silence and squirrels whom he hates a lot. His only world was his potatoes and his chocolate covered raisin and his gun and his pants. He got the chance for once in his life to get rid of his loneliness and have a companion but will he use this chance or will he blow it

The soundtrack is nice but sad which goes with the sad moral of the story. The acting is perfect but I felt I was not convinced by the passive character of the lady the decoration of the cottage is gloomy which also goes with the moral of the film: how quick we are to judge and hate

Overall I would recommend this movie only for people who like deep movies with a hidden moral. All in all I give it 5/10.
