Too Much Glue!

Matty was an 8-year old boy. He had brown frizzy hair and big blue eyes. He was wearing a blue top with striped sleeves. Matty LOVED glue! At home with dad, he made glue glasses, glue moustaches, and glue bouncy balls. But at school, Matty's Art teacher warned him, "Too much glue never dries!"

On a school day during Art Class, Matty saw the fullest bottle of glue, so he decided to make the most fantastic glue project ever. Ignoring his teacher's warnings, he squeezed the glue on the table and added sequins and glitter. After that, Matty decided to belly flop on the glue-covered table. He rolled all around and covered himself with it like a blanket. Then surprisingly, when he tried to get up, BOING! He bounced right back into the slippery, sticky mess! He called, "Can somebody help me?"

His friends tried to help him with so many ways from their imagination. They tried a gigantic tow truck to pull him up, an enormous fan to dry off the glue, but each silly attempt only made things worse! The school nurse came to check his temperature, then the principal stuck a note on his belly. Finally, Matty's dad arrived. But instead of being mad at him, he was proud of his son's creativity.
