Star turn: world gets first sports theme park

If you've ever wondered what it's like to run a 100 metre sprint alongside Usain Bolt or ride in the peloton in the Tour de France, you will be able to find out at Open Camp, the world's first sports theme park. 7000 visitors a day are expected to visit the theme park when it opens in Barcelona next year.

Simulators and other forms of interactive technology will give visitors the thrill of being a downhill skier or a top football player. There will even be award ceremonies with flags and podiums. 'We will film it using cameras and drones and a full production team so that you can relive the experience on television at home,' the organisers say.

Every night between June and September there will be a full scale closing ceremony with winners mounting the podium to receive their medals.

The park, covering an area of 95,000 sq. metres, will be on Montjuic, a hill near the city centre. It will use the Olympic stadium and other facilities built for the 1992 Olympic games. The upgrade will cost 20 million Euros (£15.8 m); it is expected to create 240 jobs and bring an estimated £53 million to the city.

A full price ticket of £45 allows you to participate in a game of football or basketball, run a 1500 metre race or take part in an Olympic discipline. The basic entrance fee will be £28, similar to most theme parks. Tickets will go on sale via a mobile app that will also serve as a guide to the theme park.

Francesc Medina, the plan's promoter, has coined the term 'sportainment' for the park, emphasising that 'it is for everyone'. They expect 7000 visitors a day to take part in the 56 activities on offer.
